

Disco FOREVER

Unlike most Halloween shows at theme parks, Disco Forever is a totally immersive and nostalgic look at the disco era overlayed with a Halloween theme. There are live singers, dancers, and actors who bring the abandoned nightclub, Studio 74, to life. As the show progresses, the audience find themselves drawn into the dark underworld. And when the spectacle ends, they exit into a courtyard that is thumping with non-stop disco music to allow the party to continue.

Abandoned club, Studio 74

A group of four friends break in, carrying flashlights, turn on the power

Transported back in time to heyday of disco

NEON everywhere, dancers in motion

Projection on stage of disco. As the show progresses, the stage becomes more decrepit, scary

Nonstop thumping drumbeat once the disco comes back to life

Evil DJ who never stops spinning, controls dancers with the mirror ball

Possibly DJ stand that descends from the ceiling

First song that starts playing: Devil's Gun by C.J. and Co. (When disco mecca Studio 54 opened its doors as a nightclub on April 26, 1977, this was the first track played.)

FIRE medley: "Fire, Hot Stuff, Disco Inferno"

Special one night only concert featuring disco diva Mona Winter

Warns kids to run before her set

"Last Dance" is song that plays as everyone is trapped forever

One of the kids manages to escape. This character can change from show to show

Big sign above dance floor: DISCO FOREVER. As the lights burn out, it spells DIE

As the show ends, the power is pulled and theater in total darkness. Evil red glow builds and thumping returns as audience exits. One survivor shows them the way out.

They exit into a plaza with a full on RAVE in progress, all disco music
